

Psalms

The Psalms are meant to be felt. Through prayer, praise, lament, and song, they trace a path back into the presence of God.

- Seventy-three psalms are attributed to David.
- Selah may signal a pause for reflection or a musical interlude.
- Psalm 30:5: “Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.”
- Psalm 42:7: “Deep calleth unto deep.” Those who are deeply rooted can recognize and strengthen one another. relationships
- Psalm 27:4: David’s desire to dwell in the house of the Lord gives the psalm a temple orientation.
